

An aerial photograph of the Concordia College campus in Moorhead, Minnesota, taken during the "golden hour" of sunset. The sun is low on the horizon to the left, casting a warm, orange glow over the scene. The campus is densely packed with green trees, some showing early autumn colors. Several large, multi-story brick buildings with red-tiled roofs are visible, interspersed among the trees. A prominent tall, thin tower with a clock face stands out on the left side. In the lower right foreground, there is a small, dark pond with a single water fountain spraying upwards. A wide, light-colored paved path winds through the green lawn in the lower left. The overall atmosphere is peaceful and scenic.
